IMPROVED MAIL FACILITIES.

A number of improvements will be inaugurated in the Portsmouth post-office beginning with the new year. All of the routes have been changed with a view of lessening the time required by the carriers to cover them, thereby insuring more prompt delivery of mails.

Another improvement in the service will be the inauguration of an additional delivery district in the district west of Washington street and including the suburbs, which heretofore will have three deliveries of mail, the same as in the down town sections.

Postmaster S. L. Burroughs has also succeeded in having the delivery district enlarged, so as to include Mt. Hermon and adjacent territory. The contemplated changes will necessitate the appointment of an additional carrier, and Mr. John J. Graf, who has heretofore been on the substitute force, has been chosen for the position.

HORSES FOR HOOK AND LADDER TRUCK.

A selection has at last been made of a pair of horses for the hook and ladder truck. The new team is from McCrory & McClellan's stables, and the horses weigh over 1,300 lbs. each. They are blacks and are perfect matches, each having the same markings, consisting of white faces and white hind feet. The team was brought over to the company's headquarters yesterday and put in service. The purchase price has been agreed upon, but the money has not been paid, and the members of the fire committee would not give the figures yesterday owing to the fact that the purchase had not been completed.

THE ATTRACTIONS THIS WEEK.

NEW OFFICE BUILDING.

A Movement on Foot to Secure a New One for Construction Department.

Editor Virginian-Pilot:

The administrative center of the department of construction and repair at the Norfolk Navy Yard was, until recently, located in building No. 31, occupying about two hundred feet in length of the upper floor of that building, together with a portion of the lower floor. On the upper floor were situated the offices of the naval constructor and his assistants, a room for correspondence and records, another for the clerical force engaged in keeping the financial accounts of the department, the requisition office and sample rooms, in which requisitions for machinery and material were prepared and where samples of the various kinds of hardware, fittings and other articles were kept; the office of the chief draftsman, the general drafting room, the filing cases for about 10,000 plans, two blue-print rooms, and rooms for the preservation of records and plans for general storage purposes. On the lower floor were situated the testing laboratory, established and used for the purpose of determining the quality of many of the materials furnished under contract; a photographic room and a large store room for the machinery and other articles requiring special care and attention.

By the fire of December 16th, 1900, all these offices were destroyed, together with about 7,000 plans, and practically all the records of the office. Some of the work is being done at the temporary offices, but the majority of the work can never be replaced; and for years to come the work of the construction department will be more or less hampered by this unfortunate occurrence. Temporary offices have been fitted in the building (No. 32) in the space previously used as a store room of the department, but this work has been done in a crude and merely temporary manner, for it would manifestly have been inexpedient to incur any great expense in fitting up such offices and rooms in that building, which is as completely subject to damage by fire as building No. 31 proved to be, besides which the mold loft itself is an indispensable adjunct to the work of the construction department, so that its use for office purposes can be but temporary.

With the steady increase in the navy, and the rapidly increasing importance of the Norfolk Yard as a factor in the work of maintaining our ships in proper and efficient condition for immediate service it would be a very short-sighted policy to take any step short of providing for the construction department a suitable fireproof building devoted exclusively to the various uses enumerated above. The attention of Congress will be at once invited to the importance of speedily providing and properly equipping a suitable two-story fireproof building for this purpose, and in order that that department may as soon as possible be again placed in a condition for the proper transaction of its business, it is hoped that Congress will promptly make the necessary appropriation of eighty-five thousand dollars for that purpose, and will at the same time make available for appropriation immediately available, so that work on the new building may be begun at once.

As the department of construction and repair at the Norfolk Yard employs more men than all the other departments of the yard put together (its monthly payroll averaging $500,000), as the number of men it can efficiently employ and the material it can efficiently purchase and use are largely dependent on its possession of the complete facilities intended to be furnished by the erection of the proposed building, it will be seen that the proposition to have such a building authorized and erected at the earliest possible moment is one in which the cities of Norfolk and Portsmouth, and in fact the whole State of Virginia, are directly interested.

Effort will be made to secure the active aid and co-operation of the Chamber of Commerce and Business Men's Association of Norfolk and the Portsmouth Board of Trade toward getting the appropriation through Congress.

A LADY ASSAULTED.

An unknown negro made an assault last night upon Mrs. Rosa Powell, a resident of Second street, South Portsmouth.

Mrs. Powell had just left the city market and was crossing the railroad track at Crawford street and the Gosport causeway, when the negro seized her. Mrs. Powell struck her assailant with a paper of eggs which she carried. The missiles broke effectively and covered the miscreant with their contents. He beat a hasty retreat.

Mrs. Powell gave a description of the negro to Police Officer Culpepper, and a search was made for him in some of the down town resorts. He was not found.

MAYOR'S COURT.

Justice C. R. Nash presided yesterday and disposed of the following cases:

James Smith, larceny of a pair of shoes from Hofheimer's store; sent to jail for six months.

Ernest Barber, David Boyd and Jas. Dunston, three negro boys charged with larceny. Barber and Boyd were given sixty days each and Dunston was discharged.

George Smith, larceny; dismissed.

A "drunk" was fined $1 and costs.
